

Walter Zelman, PhD

Walter Zelman, PhD, was a visiting researcher at the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research and a visiting professor in the Department of Health Services at the UCLA School of Public Health during the data collection phase of this project. He is now Chair of the Department of Health Science at California State University, Los Angeles.

In addition to his present and past academic roles, the author has served as a public interest lobbyist, a candidate for public office, a special assistant to a California insurance commissioner, a Clinton White House health care advisor and a president of a California state health care trade association. He has published numerous articles on health care and California politics and two books on health care market change and health policy.