Housing Insecurity Associated with Worse Access to Health Care\*

8:30 a.m.–8:45 a.m. | Omni Atlanta Hotel at CNN Center, M3 – Hickory
Featuring: Susan Babey, Joelle Wolstein, Sean Tan

Housing insecurity, whether it's moving frequently, threat of eviction, or poor housing conditions, is linked with poor health outcomes. Using data from the 2021 California Health Interview Survey, UCLA CHPR researchers Susan Babey, Joelle Wolstein, and Sean Tan examine the relationship between reported housing instability and the following access to care indicators: preventive care visits, delays in medical care, delays filling prescription medication, and foregoing medical care.

Featuring: Ninez A. Ponce, Tara Becker, Richard Calvin Chang, Corina Penaia

Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander (NHPI) populations are diverse, with different languages, histories, and cultural practices that result in specific health patterns. Due to barriers to collection and reporting of data on NHPI communities, their specific needs are not identified by federal funding formulas and grantmaking tools used to target the distribution of resources and inform program development.

The UCLA Center for Health Policy Research's NHPI Data Policy Lab has conducted focus groups with more than 100 NHPI community leaders to identify areas of need and equip communities with the tools they need to make them effective health advocates. Using this input and data from sources such as the American Community Survey and AskCHIS™ Neighborhood Edition, the Lab has constructed a new multidimensional measure, the NHPI Health Equity Index, that better identifies needs within the NHPI population.
